

Greg Cappetta currently holds the position as Public Safety Outreach Manager with Verizon. The key components of his job is to support law enforcement during training conferences both financially and through attendance. Verizon also supports these training conferences with coordination of specific presentations related to training mandates. Greg is one of five team members who help manage Verizon's Fallen Officers Fund which makes donations to families of fallen officers. These funds are distributed through a partnership with the FBI National Academy Associates.

Greg retired from the FBI after serving for 25 years as a Special Agent. While he has investigated a wide variety of criminal matters, including drug trafficking, kidnapping, extortion, bank robberies, counterfeiting, and even an undercover operation inside the Marion Penitentiary against a LCN crime boss, Greg distinguished himself in the white-collar arena. He was the Co-Case Agent on the House Bank investigation resulting in the conviction of two congressmen and one delegate. He was assigned to the Whitewater investigation where he received accommodations from Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr and Director Louis Freeh. He also conducted an investigation into the CIA Office of Inspector General (OIG), which was commissioned by the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency.

In 2004, Greg was selected as the Chief of the famed FBI National Academy - a position he held until his retirement in 2013. Graduating more than 8,700 students during his tenure, Greg earned an international reputation as a staunch advocate for law enforcement training and relationship building throughout the world. Greg carried these skills to the alumni association upon retirement becoming the Executive Director of the 17,000 member FBI National Academy Associates from 2013 to 2015.

Greg is known throughout the world for his leadership, advocacy, and character and remains very active in the international law enforcement community today. Greg holds a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration (Accounting) from Duquesne University and a Master of Science in Adult Learning and Human Resource Development from Virginia Tech.