LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER FATALITIES

According to preliminary data compiled by the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund (NLEOMF), as of December 31, 2022, 226 federal, state, tribal and local law enforcement officers died in the line-of-duty in 2022. This is a dramatic decrease of approximately 61% from the 586 officers killed in 2021. The massive decrease in line-of-duty deaths for 2022 is almost entirely related to the significant reduction in Covid-19 deaths.

While America's law enforcement officers are still battling the deadly effects of the Covid-19 pandemic, there has been a significant reduction in such overall deaths, likely attributed to reduced infection rates and the broad availability and use of vaccinations. 70 officers have died as a result of contracting the disease while executing official duties in 2022. Those 70 officers represent a decrease of 83% compared to the 405 officers who died of Covid-19-related causes during 2021. Despite these dramatic reductions, Covid-19 remains the number one cause of law enforcement deaths in 2022.

64 officers were shot and killed in the line of duty in 2022, mirroring the 64 officers who were shot and killed in 2021. This continues a disturbing trend of an increase in firearms-related deaths compared to the average number of officers killed by gunfire each year in the prior decade. From 2010 through the end of 2020, an average of 53 officers were killed each year by felonious assaults involving firearms. The 64 deaths by gunfire in both 2021 and 2022 continues to represent an increase of 21% compared to recent historical norms.

An increase in traffic-related crashes in 2022 should also be a concern for law enforcement agencies nationwide. In 2022, 40 officers have died due to traffic-related crashes, such as single-vehicle accidents, vehicle collisions, and motorcycle crashes while working along our nation's roadways. These 40 crash-related fatalities are an increase of 29% compared to the 31 crash-related deaths in 2021. While crash-related fatalities were up in 2022, the number of struck-by fatalities was down. Sixteen officers executing duties outside of their vehicle died as a result of struck-by fatalities in 2022. This represents a 41% decrease compared to the 27 officers killed in struck-by fatalities in 2021.

36 officers died of other causes in 2022, such as falling objects, fire-related incidents, and medical-related illnesses/events including heart attacks and strokes suffered while in the performance of their official duties. This represents a 39% decrease from the 59 officers who died under similar circumstances in 2021.

The data and statistics contained in this report are preliminary and do not represent a final or complete list of individual officers who will be added to the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial in 2023.

FIREARMS-RELATED FATALITIES

Of the 226 law enforcement line-of-duty deaths in 2022, firearms-related fatalities were second-only to Covid-19 as the leading cause of death. While much has been done in terms of mitigating the impact of Covid-19-related deaths, firearms-related deaths have remained disproportionately high compared to recent historical averages. In the prior decade, to include 2010-2020, the average number of officers killed each year was 53. The 64 officers killed by gunfire in 2022 mirrors the 64 such officers killed in 2021 and continues to reflect a 21% increase over the historical average of firearms-related deaths between 2010 and 2020.

Sixty-four officers were shot and killed during 2022, compared to the same number in 2021. Of the 64 firearms fatalities, 11 were ambushed, 10 were attempting to make an arrest, 9 were handling domestic disputes, 8 were investigating suspicious circumstances/persons, 6 were killed making traffic stops, and 5 were killed handling disturbance calls. Four were inadvertently or mistakenly shot by fellow officers and 3 each were shot while serving civil papers and responding to robbery calls. Two were shot while serving a felony warrant, 1 was shot handling an inmate, and the final 2 were not clearly defined.

Handguns continue to be the leading type of firearm used in fatal shootings of law enforcement officers. In 2022, 33 officers were killed with a handgun. Of the 31 additional officer firearms-related fatalities, 16 were killed with a rifle, 2 were killed by an officers weapon, and 1 was killed by a shotgun. The type of firearm used in the remaining 12 fatalities is still under investigation or unknown at this time.

Of the 64 firearms-related fatalities in 2022, 12 officers died in June followed by 8 in March and 7 in August. Six each occurred in July, October, and December. Five each occurred in January, February, and September. May had 2 officers die, followed by April and November with 1 death each.

TRAFFIC-RELATED FATALITIES

Fifty-six officers were killed in traffic-related incidents in 2022, compared to 58 in 2021, a 3% decrease. While overall traffic-related fatalities are down, crash-related deaths increased. Of the 56 traffic-related fatalities, 35 were automobile crashes and 5 were motorcycle crashes. For the prior year (2021), 28 officers were killed in automobile crashes and 3 died in motorcycle crashes. The 40 total crashes in 2022 represents a 29% increase compared to 31 in 2021.

Struck-by incidents, where an officer was hit by a vehicle while outside of their patrol vehicle, were the second-leading cause of traffic-related fatalities. Many of these fatal struck-by crashes occurred while officers were investigating motor vehicle crashes or assisting motorists on the side of the road. Sixteen struck-by fatalities occurred during the 2022, versus 27 during 2021, representing a 41% decrease.

Compared to the average number of traffic-related fatalities per decade, both 2021 and now 2022 remain higher than the past 10-year average (2010 – 2019). In the prior decade, 53 officers were killed on average each year.

OTHER CAUSES AND FATALITIES

The single largest category of officer fatalities in this report, due primarily to the inclusion of Covid-19-related deaths, is the Other category. This category contains a wide variety of health-related deaths such as heart attacks, strokes, lingering health effects from the September 11 attacks, and other line-of-duty fatalities. One hundred six officers are listed under the Other category. The 106 who died in 2022 compares to 464 who died in 2021, and represents a 77% overall decrease in 'Other' related line-of-duty deaths.

In 2022, the largest sub-section of the Other category is Covid-19-related fatalities. In 2022, 70 officers succumbed to complications from the disease, compared to 405 in 2021. Preliminary information suggests that each of these officers has died as a result of their exposure while conducting official duties. The drop in Covid-19-related deaths from 405 in 2021 to 70 in 2020 is a dramatic reduction, and represents an 83% decrease year over year.

Thirty-six additional officers in this category died of other causes not related to Covid-19 during 2022. This compares to 59 similar fatalities last year, representing a 39% decrease. Twenty-seven officers succumbed to either job-related illness or a sudden medical event. The health-related illnesses include those involved in the recovery efforts following the terrorist attacks on September 11th. The medical events generally involve heart attacks and strokes suffered as a result of actions taken while on duty. Six were killed in 3 separate aircraft crashes. The remaining three officers died as a result of one each: falling to their death, being struck by a falling object, and assisting during a fire incident.

COVID-19-RELATED DEATHS

Of the 226 confirmed law enforcement line-of-duty deaths in 2022, Covid-19-related fatalities were the leading cause of law enforcement deaths. Seventy officers succumbed to the disease in 2022, as compared to 405 officers in 2021. This reduction represents a massive 83% decrease from last year.

While the preliminary reports submitted to the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund show the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic continues to claim more law enforcement lives than any single category in this report, the decrease in these deaths in 2022 is an encouraging trend.

To date, 70 Covid-19-related fatalities have been identified. In order to properly identify these cases, NLEOMF works with federal, state, tribal and local agencies to establish the likelihood that impacted officers were exposed to individuals with Covid-19 while they were performing in their official law enforcement capacity. If such officers were exposed to the virus on-duty, and later succumbed to its effects, they will then be included in the "Other" category of line-of-duty deaths and officially counted as law enforcement fatalities.

While law enforcement officers and first line responders across the country continue to be exposed to the virus, the substantial downward trend in these deaths is welcome news. The 70 Covid-19-related law enforcement deaths under review are listed on the next page by state.
